Conrad Guettler, Editor

It feels like rather a short while since the Spring Ring True appeared, and soon after I began to ask for contributions to this year's Wolfson Review. Although I see the Review more as a yearbook, as a record covering the entire academic year 2012–2013, I do not repeat subject matter already covered in Ring True. Therefore, for example, you will not find mention of the exhibitions arranged by the Fine Arts Committee – but perhaps our readers would like to see further images of them?

It is always great to have news from our community to share, and I thank the many alumni and current College members for their emails and other communications. We also manage to compile a respectable list of 'Books by College Members' but I suspect that we are missing out on quite a few, especially perhaps from our overseas alumni. Books are the main scholarly vehicle in the arts and humanities but in the sciences, journal articles are the primary means to communicate the results of research (not a surprise to me as an ex-research physicist and having started my publishing career as an Editor on Nature). So far we have never included refereed papers, partly because the selection criteria ('best paper?') are less easy to define, and given the prolific output, the list may become unmanageably long. Perhaps a listing on the College website? The thoughts of our readers would be most welcome.

We work within a finite page budget to ensure that we can distribute the Review to our worldwide readership. With a little nudging, I hope I have nonetheless managed to collect quite a variety of items, and that you will enjoy reading about what our members are up to. Inevitably I have had to edit and condense many submissions and I can only ask for forgiveness from our authors for turning their beautifully composed prose reports into rather more concise abstracts or summaries. The task of an Editor is never an easy one!

Finally, my thanks must go to those who helped with reading and with collating the student, visitor and University lists, and especially to the Alumni & Development team for their support in assembling diverse information, sourcing photographs, verifying facts and careful proof-reading.

From the President

Professor Sir Richard Evans looks back over the highlights of the year, and forward to our 50th Anniversary.

As the College approaches its 50th Anniversary milestone in 2015, we have launched a Campaign with the target of raising £5 million. Wolfson's endowment is still small compared to those of most other Cambridge Colleges, and we need to build it up so we can refurbish our ageing buildings and provide scholarships and bursaries for our students as fees and living expenses increase and government support is cut back.

The 50th Anniversary Campaign has got off to a very good start, with an exceptionally generous grant of £1.25 million from the Wolfson Foundation to help upgrade the residences which the Foundation enabled us to build in the mid-1970s, and a munificent donation from His Excellency Mahfouz bin Mahfouz, Lord of Abernethy, GCMLJ, FRSA, which we will use for student support. Our alumni have continued to be enormously supportive of the College.

The year has been academically successful for the College too, with Professor Jon Crowcroft elected Fellow of the Royal Society, Dr Steve Hoath Fellow of the Institute of Physics and Professor George Salmond Fellow of the American Academy of Microbiologists. Senior Member Mrs Sherry Coutu was appointed CBE for services to entrepreneurship, while Senior Member Dr Rupert Curwen received two Queen's Awards for his company Ubisense. And we were all delighted when Honorary Fellow the Honorable Janet Wolfson de Botton CBE, Chairman of the Trustees of the Wolfson Foundation, was appointed Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire in the Queen's Birthday Honours List.

Wolfson's students continue to improve their academic performance, with more than a quarter of our undergraduate Tripos candidates obtaining First Class Honours in 2013 and Wolfson Master's and Doctoral students gaining a very good record of achievement. The revived Research Event in May showcased the achievements of our graduate students and was the occasion for an inspiring speech by Cambridge University Vice-Chancellor and Wolfson Honorary Fellow Professor Sir Leszek Borysiewicz, who stayed on to listen to students' presentations and chat with them over dinner.

Though it's hard to believe, our Director of Music, Lynette Alcántara, celebrated 20 years as conductor of the Choir this year, marked by a splendid concert and a surprise party afterwards; we hope she continues for a long time to come. Its active and inclusive musical life is one of the aspects of Wolfson that gives it a real sense of community, and much of this is down to Lyn.

Wolfson College will reach its 50th Anniversary in 2015. As we approach this milestone in our history, three College Officers report on progress and developments at Wolfson throughout this year.

Christopher Lawrence, Bursar

The Staff

Wolfson is going through a period where several long-serving senior staff are reaching retirement, providing opportunities for the College to celebrate their contributions while causing anxiety about how someone seemingly irreplaceable could be succeeded. Following David Luhrs (Head Porter) in 2011 and Jonathan Beart (College Accountant) in 2012, it was the turn of our Clerk of Works, Paul Chapman, to retire in the summer of 2013. Paul joined Wolfson in 1995 from the building firm Rattee & Kett, for whom he had been directly involved in the building of the Lee Library and R, S and T residence blocks, so his connection with the College goes back even further. We wish Paul well in his retirement, and we are pleased to have been able to promote his Assistant Clerk of Works, Neil Newman, to succeed him.

A major staffing development in 2013 has been the re-establishment of the post of Domestic Bursar, which had ceased in the early 1990s. The College has grown in its size and services to such an extent that I felt it appropriate to separate the hospitality-related functions from my day-to-day responsibilities, and place them under an experienced professional. The new post attracted a very strong field of applicants, and Wolfson is fortunate to have recruited Alan Fuller as its Domestic Bursar. Alan joined us from Magdalene College, where he was Catering and Conference Manager.

The Buildings

H staircase was comprehensively refurbished in 2012, with the conversion of six shared sets to 11 en-suite rooms and a shared kitchen. This was the first stage of a multi-year programme of refurbishment of the original 1970s accommodation blocks in East Court and West Court, with A and B transformed in summer 2013.

It is said that Lord (Leonard) Wolfson, when visiting the College that his family's Foundation had helped to fund, would judge the state of the College as a whole on the state of its public toilets. Were he still alive, I think he would find the College in good shape – certainly if he visited the conveniences in the main building, which benefited from a much overdue overhaul in 2013.

The Finances

The published accounts for the financial year ending 30 June 2012 showed operating income of £6m, operating expenditure at £5.7m and capital expenditure of £404k. The endowment was valued at £11.6m, and generated income of £414k in the course of the year to support various purposes, including student bursaries and grants. The accounts for the financial year 2012–2013 will be available online at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/accounts in November 2013 and will provide a good picture of how the College continues to use its financial resources wisely, always striving to maintain inter-generational equity between today's students and those in the future.

Jane McLarty, Senior Tutor

As I write at the beginning of June, we are coming to the end of the graduate admissions round for 2014 entry, unprecedentedly early. We have just made the decision to close to applicants all one-year graduate courses (MPhil, LLM, etc) because we have reached our target number of offers – last year it took until August to reach the same point. We will remain open to PhD applications to try to increase our proportion of this category relative to the one-year students, though for this group too we are already at the level of offers not reached until August 2012. This experience reflects the University's keenness to expedite the application process and thereby put Cambridge on a more equal footing with competitors such as Harvard that have a very swift decision-making process for prospective graduate students. The proportion of applicants putting Wolfson as their first or second choice is still strong, at around 49%, and Dr Jennifer Davis (Graduate Admissions Tutor) and I both feel that the quality of applicants is exceptionally high.

We continue to develop our 'added value' for graduate students, this year piloting a series of sessions on 'Scientific Writing', particularly aimed to support those grappling with first-year reports who perhaps have English as a second language; this complements our weekly Academic English classes and Thesis Writing Group, run by our International Student Officer, Dr Sally Church. Our tutorial team continues to do a fantastic job for our students; this year we say farewell to Mrs Margaret Greeves, with thanks for her stalwart service.

On the undergraduate side, we remain strong in the sciences, particularly for Medicine (because of the Cambridge Graduate Course) and for Engineering. Computer Science is another subject we are keen to develop because of the strength of our Fellowship in this area. Arts and Humanities applications, however, continue to struggle in the new £9,000 fee regime. A new intercollegiate committee has formed, the Strategy Group on Mature Student Outreach and Admissions, in order to try to tackle the challenges in this area, but there are no easy solutions: mature students are more debt-averse than those who still have access to the 'bank of mum and dad', particularly if they are not certain that a particular degree course will lead directly to employment. Our student support funds continue to be crucial for both undergraduate and graduate students, and this year we are on course to award some £65,000 in grants for hardship and travel.

In both 2011 and 2012 we ranked above the other three mature Cambridge Colleges and one undergraduate College in the Tompkins table (which orders Colleges according to their academic results), so our mature undergraduates are doing well. My ambition is to see them doing even better.

Fran May

Karen Stephenson, Development Director

This has been a wonderful year for the College's fundraising, and I am delighted to thank all our generous supporters who have given gifts to Wolfson, as we approach the College's 50th Anniversary in 2015.

Our £5 million Anniversary Campaign has students at its heart and is raising funds for all areas of student support: from the improvement of our accommodation to provide appropriate facilities which cater to the specific needs of our mature students, to bursaries, scholarships and conference grants to enable the best and brightest students to benefit from Wolfson's uniquely egalitarian and cosmopolitan ethos, irrespective of their financial means.

In June this year, we were delighted to learn of an award from the Wolfson Foundation of £1.25 million towards the refurbishment of our core student accommodation. We are enormously grateful to the Foundation and the Trustees for all their advice, support and interest in our wonderful institution which bears their name. We share a vision for excellence and look forward to working with the Foundation to complete this exciting refurbishment project. The student accommodation, in East and West courts, flanks the Porters' Lodge, and comprises the buildings originally constructed with the first Wolfson Foundation gift in 1972, which secured the College's future and led to the College being renamed Wolfson College, Cambridge, on 1 January 1973. Work was carried out on A and B blocks over the long summer vacation, and the next phase will take place in summer 2014, to ensure that student life may continue unhindered.

Also during the summer months, we were extremely pleased to admit Wolfson's first Bredon Fellow to the College. His Excellency Mahfouz bin Mahfouz, Lord of Abernethy, GCMLJ, FRSA, very generously gave an unrestricted gift, with which the College has chosen to support student scholarships at Wolfson. This wonderful gift will make an enormous difference in our ability to provide scholarships for the brightest students from across the world, producing a yearly income from our endowment.

We were delighted to welcome His Excellency to Wolfson in July with his brother Mohammad Marei Mubarak bin Mahfouz and his advisor Mr Busief Lamlum, when they met Wolfson students and learned more about those who will benefit from this munificence.

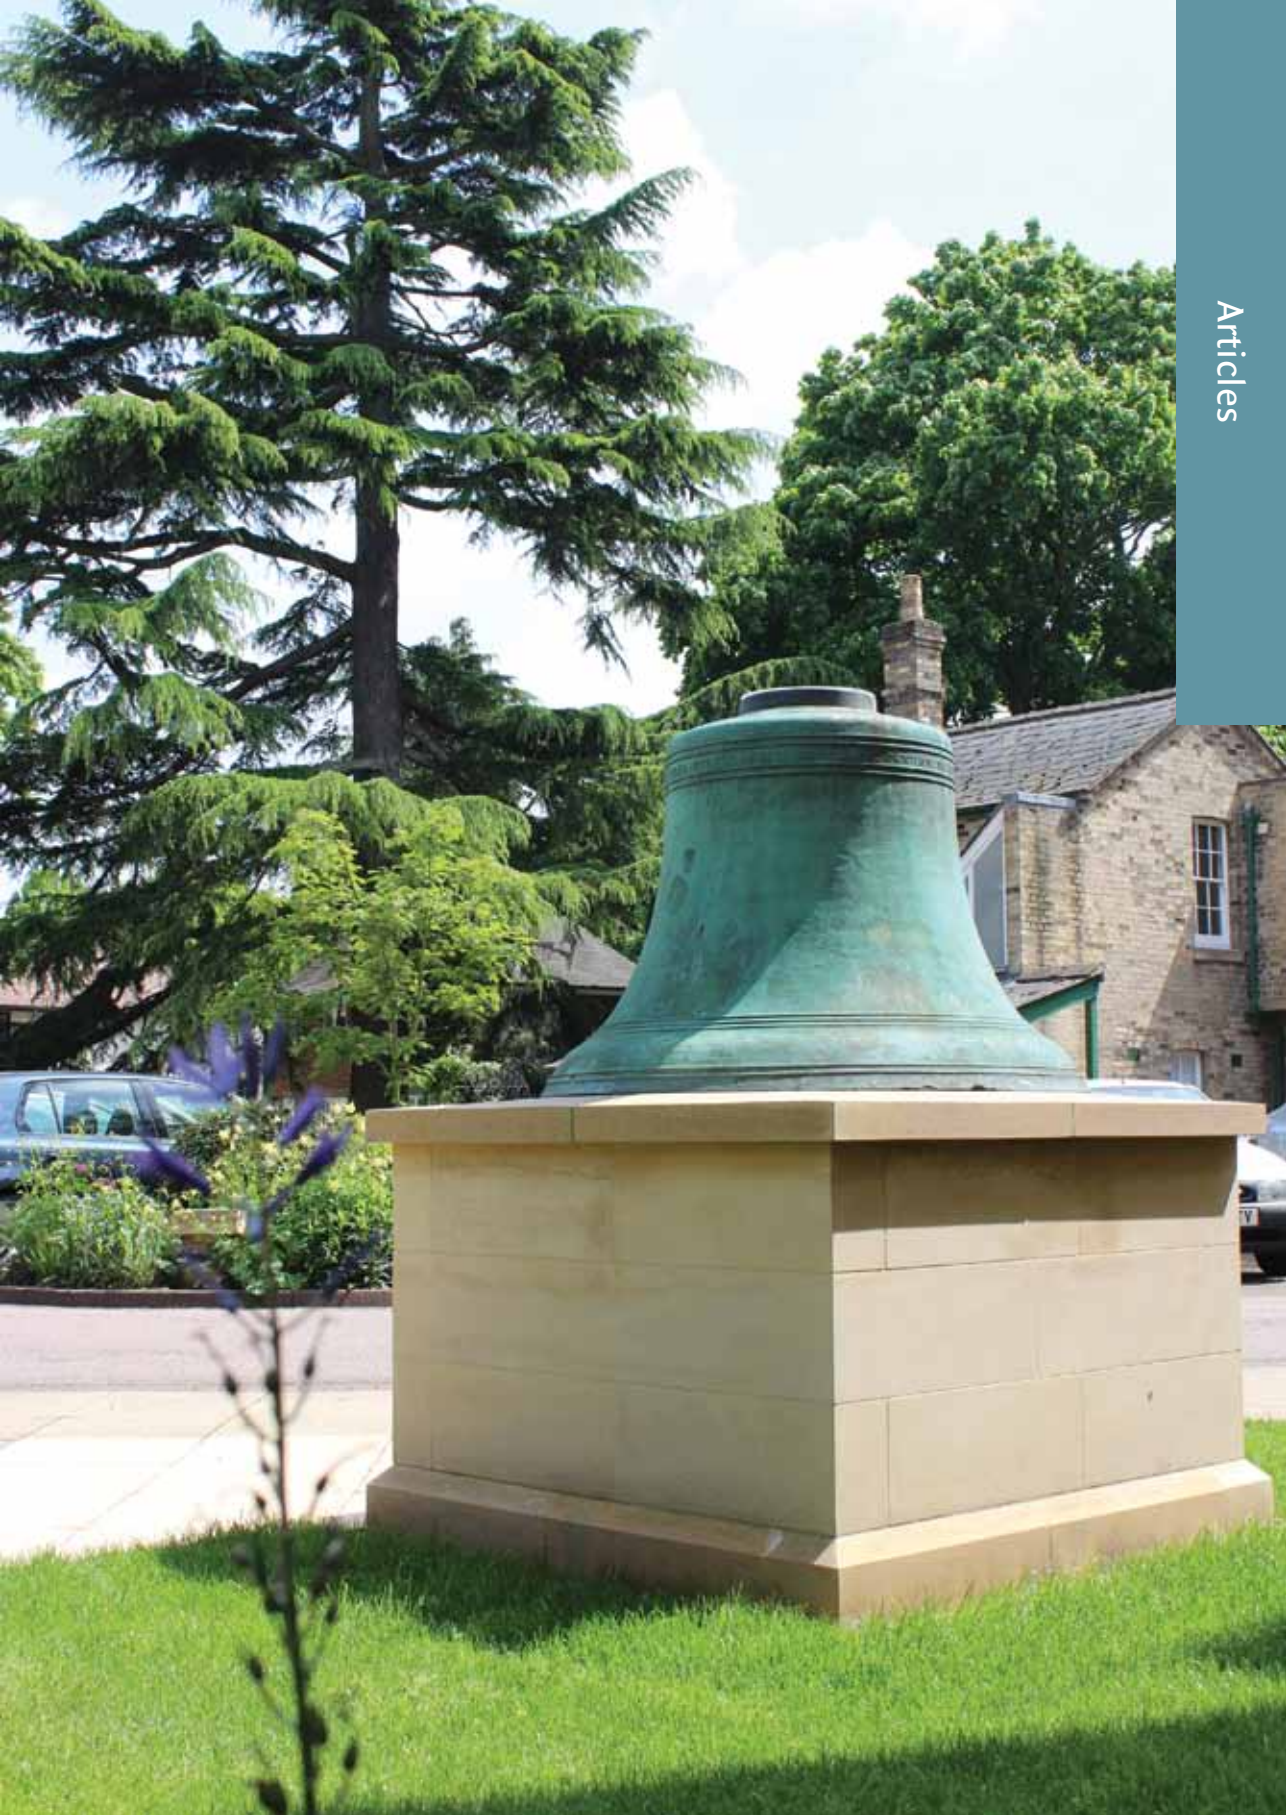

Our thanks also go to a number of Wolfson members and friends who have made outstanding gifts to Wolfson this year. Among them are alumna Ms Yidi Lu (2005) and Emeritus Fellow and former Senior Tutor Dr Joan Whitehead (1976), both of whom gave unrestricted gifts to the Campaign; College Research Associate and former Visiting Fellow Professor Irene Ng, who established the Dato Ng Kong Yeam Prize in honour of her father; Santander Universities UK who supported eight Scholarships; Fellow Professor Brian Moore FRS (1983), who gave matched-funding for monies raised towards a new concert-standard grand piano; and student Mr Todd Treusdell (2011), who generously contributed to a new 'scull' for the Boat Club.

Another new venture this year was Wolfson's first ever telephone fundraising campaign. Our callers spoke to almost 1,000 Wolfson members over a period of six weeks, and £65,000 was raised during that time, with a further £40,000 pledged towards the 50th Anniversary Campaign: proof, if ever it were needed, of the generosity of Wolfson's altruistic members. From gifts of £10 to over £100 per month, every penny will be used to support Wolfson's core aim to promote education, learning and research. Thank you so much to everyone who took the time to speak to our callers and who gave (or pledged to give) their support so generously: there is potency in working together and we are enormously grateful for every single gift.

As our 50th Anniversary approaches ever more rapidly, the President, his wife Dr Christine Corton and I are making plans to travel to Asia in spring 2014. In 2015, we hope to visit the USA, and we are very much looking forward to seeing old friends and meeting new ones among Wolfson's worldwide membership. We are also drawing up a programme of events for the anniversary year. We plan a series of 50-minute lectures on the past 50 years in a wide range of subjects, as well as celebratory events to mark the occasion. Please do let us know if you have particular suggestions for the College to consider via alumni@wolfson.cam.ac.uk

In particular, do send your summary of Wolfson in 50 words to [Tom Laws at communications@wolfson.cam.ac.uk](mailto:Tom Laws at communications@wolfson.cam.ac.uk): we will place a selection on the 50th Anniversary section of the College website.

Cambridge ghosts

Phil Mynott

John Naughton, Vice-President

A few days ago, I found myself reading E M Forster's The Longest Journey and was brought up short by this passage:

"A little this side of Madingley, to the left of the road, there is a secluded dell, paved with grass and planted with fir-trees. It could not have been worth a visit twenty years ago, for then it was only a scar of chalk, and it is not worth a visit at the present day, for the trees have grown too thick and choked it."

The reason I was struck by the passage is that I live in Madingley (about three miles from Wolfson) and I pass this secluded 'dell' every day. It's on University land and there is a fierce 'Private Property' sign on the gate. So next time I was heading to College, I looked over the gate into what had once been a deep chalk pit and imagined Forster and his undergraduate chums sitting there discussing the existence of objects. "Do they exist only when there is someone to look at them?" he writes in the novel. "Or have they a real existence of their own? It is all very interesting, but at the same time it is difficult."

It is indeed. One of the magical things about Cambridge is that it has so many places which have these ghostly resonances. If you stand looking at Trinity Great Gate, you can see Newton's rooms on the right. And archeological research suggests that he had his secret alchemical 'laboratory' abutting the wall of the chapel. Or you can walk down Free School Lane past the old Cavendish building and pass the lab where J J Thompson discovered the electron in 1897; the room where, in 1932, Ernest Walton and John Cockroft first split the atom; and the room where, in 1953, Francis Crick and James Watson first unveiled the structure of the DNA molecule. And of course you can turn into Bene't Street, where – according to Watson – "Francis winged into the Eagle to tell everyone within hearing distance that we had found the secret of life."

Are these resonances of anything more than sentimental value? I think they are: by reminding us of the intellectual giants who have lived and worked here, they make us think of our responsibility to do the best we can in our own – modest – ways.

Celebrating 20 years as conductor of the Wolfson Choir

Lynette Alcántara (1996), Fellow and Director of Music

In 1992 I travelled to the UK from Australia on a scholarship to further my vocal studies. I left behind a number of choirs which I had greatly enjoyed conducting so, in 1993, I was thrilled to find Wolfson Choir in need of a conductor. My original plan was to stay for two years. However, attractive work opportunities with the Monteverdi Choir and the BBC Singers, and in 1998 as Director of Music at Wolfson, convinced me to stay longer. Thus began a wonderful 20-year association with Wolfson Choir and the College.

I inherited a tiny but enthusiastic group of about 10 singers, but as the College has grown, so too has the choir, numbering 60 members at its largest, and averaging 35–40. One constant in the life of the choir has been its remit as welcoming and non-auditioned, giving all College members the opportunity to experience the Western choral tradition. Where else but at Wolfson would you find the following working towards a common musical goal: the world expert on hearing, a would-be guitarist with the Bay City Rollers turned Professor of Music, one of Lou Reed's backing singers, a sculptress turned art historian, a coach of the College rowing club, a quantum physicist and a saxophone-playing actuary?

Over the years we have given concerts and services covering much of the standard repertoire. For larger works we have collaborated with Coro Amici in Musica from Rome (Mozart Requiem, Pergolesi Stabat Mater, Faure Requiem, Vivaldi Gloria), Voix de Vivre (Durufle Requiem), St Mark's Choir (Handel Messiah and Bach St John Passion) and Fitzwilliam Chapel Choir. Members of the choir have represented Wolfson at the University's 800th Anniversary BBC Prom concert, and also sung in Mahler Symphony of a Thousand in Ely Cathedral. Through my other work, the choir has also been involved in BBC Songs of Praise and the Easter at King's TV programmes. I instigated the Wolfson Advent Carol Service, and began taking the choir abroad to broaden its musical experience, including a number of successful tours to Rome and Greece.

We have had many dedicated and talented accompanists over the years without whom my job would have been very difficult. These include Kenneth Pope, Andrew Oxenham, Ben Davies, Anthony Gritten, Stephen Rose, Felicia Cheng, James Bendall, Matthew Woolhouse and, currently, Andrew Goldman.

To celebrate 20 years of conducting the choir, we gave a performance of Purcell's opera Dido and Aeneas: incidentally it was as Dido that I made one of my earliest appearances in a Wolfson concert in 1993. Due to illness, the Sorceress was unavailable, and thus I was forced to step in wielding a wand for part of the performance, as well as a baton. For Dido, the Lee Hall has never been so full! It was wonderful to see so many former choir and Music Society members return to Wolfson for the event. Afterwards I was thrown a lovely party at which the choir sang a newly composed song by Andrew Goldman and Jill Bambury: 'The Queene of the Choir – Ring True!'

Thank you to everyone at Wolfson for making the last 20 years so pleasurable: I look forward to the next 20.

Library news

Fran May

Jenny Sargent, Lee Seng Tee Librarian

As I write, the Reading Room is full to bursting, as another busy year culminates with students hard at work preparing for exams or thesis deadlines.

It's heartening to see such tangible evidence of the value of the Library to the Wolfson community. At the same time, it reminds us of our responsibility to ensure that the service develops alongside and continues to meet the needs of those who use it. To that end, early in Easter Term we carried out an online survey, giving users the opportunity to tell us their views. We're extremely grateful to the tremendous number who took the time to complete the survey, and we look forward to using their feedback to inform service development. Our gratitude is also due to all those who have supported the Library through donations over the past year.

In other news, Laurence Smith (Library Assistant) and I were delighted to welcome a new member to the Library team this year: Frieda Midgley joined us in January as Wolfson's first professional Archivist and Records Manager. With the College's 50th Anniversary rapidly approaching, the need to establish a formal archive of its past activities is pressing, and this goes hand in hand with the formulation of robust records management practices for the future. The creation of this new post is an important and exciting development in the life of the College, and one which has relevance for, and seeks to engage with, not only staff but all Wolfson members past, present and future. Do read on to hear what Frieda has to say about her role and the newly created College Archive.

During Michaelmas term I will hand over to a new Lee Librarian as I take up the post of Cory Library Manager at the University's Botanic Garden, a part-time role which will afford me more time to pursue my dance teaching ambitions. Although excited about these new opportunities I will be sad to leave Wolfson and must thank the community for making my time here so enjoyable.

The College Archive

Frieda Midgley, Archivist and Records Manager

It is quite a rare thing to have the opportunity to build up an Archives and Records Management service from scratch, so I was delighted to be offered the chance to do so, particularly in the context of a community as welcoming as I have found Wolfson to be.

I have been appointed to carry out two main functions: to establish and run an Archive for the College, and to establish and encourage good records management practice. This is important not just because it supports the core functions of the College, enabling us to comply with our legal obligations and protect our interests, but also because it supports public accountability, and forms the basis of our institutional memory.

In the College Archives, I am bringing together a collection that reflects the life and work of the College community, as well as the central administration of the College; preserving this for future generations and making it available to those with an interest in the history of the College and its members.

The collection already includes items as varied as oral history interviews with founding members, early students and others with a significant and often unique perspective on the life and history of the College over the years, as well as June Event programmes, a signed Lent Bumps programme from 1975 and a College scarf in the blue and gold colours that predated the Grant of Arms. With the 50th Anniversary approaching, we will be making good use of the archive collections to reflect our history as an institution and a community.

If you have items relating to your experience of life at Wolfson which you might consider donating to the College Archives (such as posters, leaflets and programmes produced by Wolfson clubs and societies, photographs that illustrate College life, or even audio and video recordings), I would be very interested to hear about them (archivist@wolfson.cam.ac.uk).

Wolfson gardens: the wild flower areas and their part in helping pollinating bees

Philip Stigwood, Head Gardener

Philip Stigwood

Here in the Wolfson gardens, the gardeners are doing as much as possible to help the vitally important role which pollinating bees play in producing the nation's food by planting more wild flower areas for the bees to enjoy.

Bee numbers are in decline due to many factors, such as fewer wild flower meadows, the increasing use of systemic insecticides by farmers and the appearance of new strains of viruses and other diseases affecting bees. Bees play a huge role in pollinating our fruit trees and vegetables, and we are all being encouraged to provide more bee food to help them survive and proliferate.

Bees enjoy plants with blue, yellow and white flowers most: they cannot see red flowers! Many 'wild' flowers are in the blue, yellow and white spectrum and we have been encouraging flowers such as Buttercup, Self-heal, Ox-eye daisies, Clover and Veronica to flourish in the gardens by leaving areas of grass to grow uncut. During May and June this gives a spectacular sight in the large areas of grass on the Western Field extremity.

Last autumn we planted a Camassia (tall, blue flowers) and Pheasant Eye (white) daffodil wild flower meadow area adjacent to the Chancellor's Centre, and this year an area in Chadwick House garden contains a mix of wild and cultivated plants growing together in the lawn. Butterflies also love these flowers.

We also have many early flowering plants such as Crocus, Snowdrops and Daphne, which early bees love to feed on, and perennials in our borders such as Rudbeckia, Campanula, Salvia, Asters and Verbena providing mid- to late-summer nectar.

Bees are truly resourceful too and one type even shaves the hairs off the leaves of the Stachys (Lamb's ear) plants with their jaws to use in the tunnels of their egg production nests!

My journey to Wolfson

Paul Doran (2011), Student

Unlike many vet students, who have known from a young age that this was the path they wanted to follow, the thought of going to university never occurred to me until I was 23.

My previous career was as a chef. I enjoyed the challenge and excitement of professional cooking but had never really wanted to do it for the rest of my life. When my wife and I were expecting a baby it prompted me to think seriously about the future, as I wanted to be able to see our child grow up; cooking, for the most part, is not very compatible with that.

Having grown up in a rural area with a keen interest in produce and agriculture, and having always been reasonably capable in sciences at school, I developed a passionate wish to become a farm vet. I was lucky enough to find a job working in farm supplies, which was not only connected to my future ambitions but also allowed me enough free time to study for A-levels, gain work experience in animal industries and vet practices and actually to spend time with my family.

I applied to Wolfson for many reasons. I thought that the atmosphere and environment of a mature college in Cambridge would make me feel less at odds than being in one of the other Colleges that are not as accustomed to taking on mature students. I was also confident that my application was more likely to be viewed in the right way.

From researching the vet degrees available in the UK I was also keen to study at Cambridge, as I felt it was the course most likely to prepare me amply for the transition into practice even though it is a year longer than other courses. Finally, of all the possibilities, I thought that Cambridge would be the best place to raise our son: a significant concern in my case.

Now I am delighted to be able to live in College with my family, as Wolfson is in an attractive area and provides a safe environment for children. This simply wouldn't have been possible anywhere else.

From Shanghai to Wolfson College

Yunlian Chen (2011), Visiting Scholar

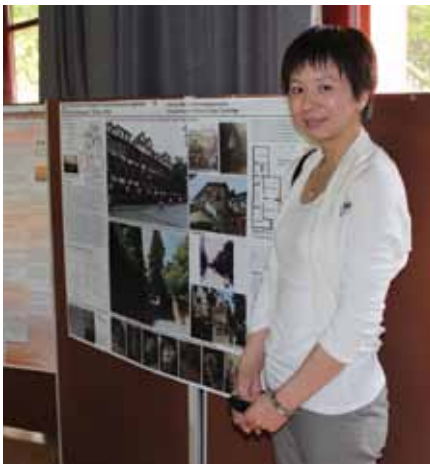

My curiosity from a young age about British Architecture in Shanghai first brought me to Cambridge in the summer of 2010. On the bus to Heathrow, after spending three weeks consulting the huge Jardine Matheson Archives at the University Library, I decided I must spend two years in Cambridge to pursue my new research project on British Colonial Architecture in South East Asia. This was the start of my journey to Wolfson College.

I returned to my university (Nagoya) in Japan and was lucky to be awarded a travel grant by the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science, for a visit to Cambridge from April 2012. In the first two months, I was busy setting up my new life and securing new archives. At that time, I still did not understand what a Cambridge College is. Then I met a professor who has been based in Cambridge for over 20 years and asked him the same question. The surprising answer was, "Oh, even I don't understand what a College is. Just apply to one and enjoy it!" With this advice, I found Wolfson, and my second step was to approach the College in July 2012.

Finally, I arrived at Wolfson in September 2012 and this opened a new chapter of my Cambridge life. I find myself enjoying reading books or writing papers in the Lee Library, happy to talk with students and other College members about research, or about China and Japan at lunchtime or in Formal Hall. I also enjoy walking in the gardens to find new inspirations for my research. Wolfson has also given me great opportunities to present my research at a Lunchtime Seminar and at the 2013 Research Event. In fact, this was the first time that I had given presentations in front of audiences of mostly western scholars. I was very nervous beforehand and worried about forgetting all the things I wanted to say, or that my English just would not come out. But when I stood in front of the audiences with their friendly smiles and kind encouragements, I was completely relaxed. Thanks to all their warm support, I was able to share my research with Wolfson members.

Now I am concentrating on writing my first academic book on the former British Settlement and Architecture in Shanghai. I believe I will treasure throughout my life the fruitful days I spent at Wolfson.

Valuing the legacy of Bernard Leach: an oral history project

Harry Bradshaw (1991) is Director of UK Projects for Pro-Natura, an international non-government organisation working in environmental conservation and sustainable development. His long association with Wolfson began in 1991, while he became a Senior Member in 2009. Here he explains his interest in Leach-related pottery and how it led to a major oral history project.

Bernard Leach CBE CH (1887–1979) is generally recognised as the most influential potter of the twentieth century, while his colleague Shoji Hamada (1894–1978) is equally important in the history of Japanese pottery. They came to St Ives in Cornwall to set up a pottery in 1920, which proved the single most important event in the history of modern studio pottery. Leach's influence is worldwide and his philosophy is of great theoretical importance. His seminal work A Potter's Book was published in 1940 and has sold over 150,000 copies: a remarkable achievement.

My interest in pottery began over 20 years ago during a visit to the Leach Pottery in St Ives. I have vivid memories of Janet Leach (1918–1997) speaking in a strong Texan accent while Trevor Corser, who worked at the pottery for 40 years, showed me his workshop. I discovered Bernard Leach had spent many years in Japan where he was recognised for the excellence of his work. About ten years ago I first visited Japan, a land where pottery is cherished as one of the highest art forms.

Until the 1970s, Bernard Leach was also highly regarded in England but thereafter his influence waned. His approach relies on potters throwing on the wheel to exacting standards, which requires lengthy skills training, not now widely available at universities and art schools. The current trend in modern ceramics champions individualism and freedom of expression over skills training. The Leach Pottery reflected this trend when it re-opened in 2008 following extensive refurbishment as a heritage and modern ceramics centre.

Against this background, the sidelining of the Leach approach may be seen as a loss of traditional knowledge and skills. In view of the retirement of so many key potters, how could the knowledge, ideas and legacy of Leach and his colleagues be preserved and enhanced? Having gained funding from the Heritage Lottery Fund, we invited 25 potters to give oral history testimonies centred on their life-story along with a discussion of pots, Leach's ideas and their own interests and philosophy.

We received an overwhelmingly positive response but sadly missed a few eminent potters we had wished to record. One, William Marshall (1923–2007), was a particularly skilled and pivotal figure and the living embodiment of the Leach tradition.

In the course of our project we were delighted to receive recordings made by a Canadian archivist in the 1970s, which included hours of fascinating interviews with Bernard Leach and William Marshall, all now in the archive. Recordings from 29 potters under the title 'Potters of the Bernard Leach Legacy' can be found at the British Library Sound Archive in London: <http://cadensa.bl.uk/uhtbin/cgiisirs/x/0/0/5?searchdata1=CKEY7376925&library=ALL>.

We hope these recordings will stimulate greater scholarship on Bernard Leach and his legacy. Two pertinent references by Bernard Leach and Soetsu Yanagi are now available in the Lee Library.

Bringing Pompeii to Cambridgeshire schoolchildren

Sally Church (1998), Fellow and Tutor, and Tony Lentin (1981), Senior Member

Thanks to a Heritage Lottery Fund grant of £49,000, the charity Civilizations in Contact, directed by Wolfson Fellow Sally Church with offices in Wolfson College, carried out the scheme 'Bringing Pompeii and Herculaneum to Cambridgeshire Schools' during the Easter Term. It immersed 285 children from five Cambridge-area schools in the history of the Romans and Roman Britain through art, drama and role-play. Lively teaching was provided to Arbury, Kings Hedges, Abbey Meadows, St Luke's and Shirley primary schools, followed by trips to the British Museum. It was the experience of a lifetime for these children, some of whom had never been to the centre of Cambridge, let alone to London or Pompeii. One youngster, while engaged in making a wax writing tablet, asked if this was the kind of tablet you take when you are sick, or a computer. Photographs of the activities, along with some of the artwork they produced, including mosaics, felt and clay figures, were displayed at the Cambridge Central Library during July.

Tony Lentin accompanied a group to the British Museum and offers his impressions.

For several years I had run a weekly elementary Latin class at Shirley Primary School and, on 10 June, I accompanied 66 excited 8 to 9-year-olds and three 11-year-olds from Arbury Primary School to the British Museum exhibition. The responsibility for shepherding the children in London was shared with Arbury teachers, and I found the experience great fun. As the coach proceeded through the East End, there was great interest in the Olympic stadium and other sites. County Hall was confidently identified as Buckingham Palace. On arrival at the British Museum, groups of children whizzed through this popular and spectacular exhibition.

Cambridgeshire schoolchildren learn about the Romans.

Afterwards, their specialist art teacher invited them to record their impressions of memorable items or aspects of life in Pompeii. Among the more popular exhibits with the children was a mosaic of a guard-dog, another of a skeleton, and the corpse – cast in resin – of a woman who perished in the disaster. My own favourite fresco, outside a Pompeiian public house called 'The Phoenix', depicts that immortal bird and reads "The phoenix is happy. May you be so too (or perhaps: How about you?)."

Modernity and the cultural politics of ethnicity

Bruce Berman (1977), Smuts Visiting Research Fellow (2012)

My research at Wolfson was on an issue that emerged from 20 years' work on modern ethnic politics in Africa and, as director of an international programme, Ethnicity and Democratic Governance, examining the factors shaping politicised ethnicity on all continents. It became clear that those factors were almost universal – the subjection of pre-modern agrarian societies to modern states, both national and colonial, and their incorporation into market economies.

Nevertheless, most contemporary scholarship and public policy has treated Africa as a continent apart, of uniquely intense and violent ethnic conflicts, a 'developmental failure' because of its ethnic diversity; reproducing in more neutral-sounding language the older stereotypes of 'darkest Africa'. Ethnic groups (no longer 'tribes') were assumed to be primordial communities of archaic, unchanging cultures, with little sense of national identity in the states they inhabit with other, assumed to be rival, communities. Closer investigation reveals that none of this is true. The ethnic groups of contemporary Africa are modern political creations, written into existence by the first generation of a literate intelligentsia created in the schools of colonial Africa. Moreover, in imagining their societies, they combined interpretations of their indigenous cultures and histories with diverse cultural resources borrowed from Europe, including the Bible, which gave rich historical and metaphorical evidence for imagining the origins of a people, and European anthropology.

How then to release Africa from its intellectual and political ghetto of 'difference' based on ethnic hatreds and developmental failure, especially in light of the rapid development of many African states? My research sought to trace the elements of European culture and history that shaped African ethnic development. What seems clear is that there is a complex interaction between the creation of ethno-national 'cultures', the growth of social Darwinism and 'racial science', and a conservative political reaction against secular revolutionary democracy and socialism. Modern ethnic politics is fuelled by notions of communities of common history, language, culture and biological descent based on myths of primordial origins, racial purity and unique cultural authenticity. Such conceptions have proved compelling to communities worldwide, disrupted by their incorporation into modern states and markets and the striking inequalities they produce.

Lee Seng Tee Distinguished Lecture 2013: The outbreak of the First World War

Professor Margaret MacMillan, Warden of St Antony's College Oxford

Professor Margaret MacMillan, Warden of Wolfson's sister College in Oxford, St Antony's, gave the sixth lecture in this series on 13 June 2013. The series was endowed by Dr Lee Seng Tee on the occasion of the College's 40th anniversary in 2005; recordings of all the lectures are available at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/lee-lecture. Here is a summary of her lecture.

The First World War continues to haunt us: the scale of the losses, the profound changes to European society, the impact on the international order, a sense that it need never have happened, all combine to keep the flow of books and films coming out. And we continue to worry away at the puzzle of how it started. Who or what was to blame? Should we look at those individuals, from Kaiser Wilhelm II to Sir Edward Grey, who either took Europe towards war or failed to prevent it? At certain professions, the military planners, for example, who dreamed of quick and successful offensives, or social classes such as the landed aristocracy with their fears of social revolution? Or at the great impersonal forces of nationalism, imperialism or economic rivalries? In a curious way, because there are so many possible explanations for the outbreak of the war, we tend to assume that it was bound to happen.

There are two interesting questions which we might ask before we reach such a conclusion. First, why did the long peace which Europe had enjoyed – with a few exceptions of wars on its periphery such as the Crimean or short ones such as the summer 1866 war between the Austrian Empire and Prussia – not last? After all there were as many forces pushing for peace as there were for war. Two disarmament conferences which all the major powers attended were held at The Hague before 1914; their achievements were relatively insignificant but it was a start towards a new way of managing international relations without resort to war. There was clearly much public support. Europe had a strong peace movement well rooted in the growing middle classes which supported arbitration to settle disputes among nations. Perhaps even more important, the Second International, which brought together the growing number of socialist and left wing parties, pledged itself repeatedly to prevent a general war. Europe had enjoyed such progress and prosperity and was so intertwined economically that, for many Europeans, and much of the rest of the world, war was almost unthinkable.

The second interesting question, it seems to me, is what made the key decision-makers think differently in that final crisis in the summer of 1914. We need therefore to try and understand their mental framework, the ideas and assumptions that made them imagine that war was a reasonable option. Three in particular overlapping and influencing each other: nationalism, Social Darwinism, militarism. Seeing oneself as part of that large entity called a nation rather than, say, a clan or religion, was something quite new in European history but it acquired great force in the course of the nineteenth century as, across the Continent, national movements coalesced around shared histories, languages, cultures or religions. Nationalism helped to create the new nations of Germany and Italy. It threatened to destroy the multi-national empires of Russia, Austria-Hungary and Ottoman Turkey. It also stirred up rivalries, suspicions and mutual hatreds and so added to the pressures towards war rather than peace. Closely linked to nationalism was Social Darwinism, a bastardised form of evolutionary theory which argued that nations were species much as any flora or fauna and that they too were locked into a relentless struggle for survival. Finally, militarism, which both promoted the spread of military values such as discipline and self-sacrifice as desirable for civilian society, and the notion that the military were the best and most noble part of the nation, helped to prepare at least some Europeans for war.

We also need to take into account that most of those in positions of authority assumed that any war would be short. In spite of mounting evidence that the advantage had swung to the defensive and that battles were likely to turn into costly stalemates, the military still counted on waging short decisive battles.

None of nationalism, Social Darwinism or militarism nor the short-war assumption in itself brought about the outbreak of the First World War. Rather when the assassination of the Archduke at Sarajevo on 28 June 1914 raised tensions in the Balkans and then throughout the Continent, enough Europeans, most importantly those who had to decide between war and peace, were already psychologically prepared to choose the former. How that fatal train of events developed, which included Germany's blank cheque to Austria-Hungary in its determination to destroy Serbia, or Russia's equal determination to protect its little Balkan protégé, Germany's two-front mobilization against Russia and France, and Britain's difficult decision to intervene to support France and Belgium, is the subject of another story.

Humanities Society

Jane Chapman (1971), Visiting Fellow (2009)

The Humanities Society held a record 21 talks during the year offering international interest and stimulating ideas across the Humanities.

One indicator of success in a talk is the amount of discussion generated. For this, the prize goes to philosopher Professor Simon Blackburn, who not only attracted the biggest attendance for 'Brains, Science and Human Nature', but also managed to excite both criticism and approval. Less contentious, but equally well attended, was our President's talk on a conservative rebel, Friedrich Reck-Malleczewen, in Hitler's Germany.

The most frequent feedback has been that supporters enjoy our range of subjects – from coin finds (Dr Martin Allen) to how we know who we think we are ('Culture, Politics and Identity', Professor Bruce Berman). Many students appreciated the talk by Vice-President Professor John Naughton entitled 'Digital Affordances: some implications for the humanities', whilst aspiring authors came to hear about Professor John B Thompson's research on the publishing industry, 'Merchants of Culture: the making of bestsellers'.

International themes were prominent, from historical perspectives on China (Professor Roel Sterckx), Gallipoli (Professor Sam Lieu), Phoenicia (Dr Fred Hirt), Syria (Dr Simon Mills), Morocco (Dr Amira Bennison), the Punjab (Dr Tahir Kamran), Iraq (Dr Glen Rangwala), Sri Lanka (Dr Sujit Sivasundaram) and Greece (Dr Michael Scott), and a popular talk by Professor David Maxwell on Zimbabwe since independence.

Some speakers presented specialist research topics with relevant messages for the present: Professor Boyd Hilton on austerity and free trade from a nineteenth-century perspective, Dr Laura Arrington on 'Art, Empire and Revolution', Professor Matthew Kramer on legal philosophy and Dr Jenna Ng on the scope offered by the mobile camera.

Finally, Professor Simon Goldhill of King's College and Director of CRASSH masterfully combined research into the classics with visual arts and present day gender concerns in his 'Sappho, Lincoln and the American Senate: picturing female desire in the nineteenth century'.

For our success so far, and for the future 2013–2014 programme, thanks to co-convenors Dr Christine Corton, Sebastiaan Keibek and Dr Simon Mills. Programme published at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/humanities

Science Society

Amy Wyatt (2011) and David De Sancho (2011), Junior Research Fellows

The Wolfson College Science Society aims to deliver an interesting and entertaining lecture series featuring research from many different scientific disciplines for the enjoyment of College members and the wider Cambridge community. We encourage everyone with an interest to attend our talks, and emphasise that a scientific background is not necessary. For the first time, we attended the Freshers' Fair to advertise the talks scheduled for Michaelmas Term and our inaugural Nominate a Speaker promotion. As a result, we received a large number of nominations from across the College community.

For the 75th anniversary of the Cambridge Computer Laboratory, we were delighted to hear talks given by Dr Andrew Herbert OBE (former Managing Director of Microsoft Research) who is building a replica of the world's first practical electronic digital computer, and Dr Samuel Aaron (Computer Laboratory), developer of Sonic Pi, an educational set of tools to introduce children to computers. Additionally, Mat Cook (Microsoft Research) showed us how computer science can be fun in his presentation on Kinect technology.

We were guided through planetary landscapes by Professor Paul Murdin (Astronomy) and taken on a journey to the Antarctic by Dr Eoin Macdonald-Nethercott (European Space Agency). Professor Rick Mitchell (Engineering) told us about 'The great ink crisis' and Dr John Jones (University of Aberdeen, Engineering) discussed his research on fuel supply and utilisation. Dr Elisa de Ranieri (Nature Communications) delivered a highly anticipated talk on 'Publishing in Nature journals'. As always, our talks on biology and medicine, this year given by Dr Damian Crowter (Genetics), Professor Dame Janet Thornton (EMBL-EBI), Professor Gillian Murphy (Oncology) and Professor Steve Oliver (Biochemistry) were all very well received.

We would like to thank all our speakers and all those who attended our seminars for their valuable contribution to our mission of promoting science within the College.

Forthcoming events will be announced at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/science

Lunchtime Seminar Series

Meredith Hale (2009), Fellow

This academic year the Lunchtime Seminar Series featured 23 speakers: students, Fellows, Senior Members, visiting academics and guest speakers. As in past years, they represented a wide range of disciplines, from Dr Neville Silverston's 'Stories from a Country Practice' to PhD student Rafael Milan Kropiunigg's talk on efforts to historicise the revolts of 1968.

Two special events initiated our new sub-series about the College: former Wolfson President Dr Gordon Johnson's talk on the history of the College and 'An Evening with Artist Mr Anthony Green RA', co-sponsored by the Fine Arts Committee. This comprised a discussion between art critic Dr Frank Whitford and Anthony Green, a reception and a viewing of the exhibition. Other talks on art and history of art included Dr Hannelore Hägele's on 'Polychromy'; Dr Julia E Poole's discussion of ambassadorial housekeeping in Paris 1762–1763; and Dr Karen Brown's view of contemporary Irish poets and their responses to works of art in Derek Mahon's 'Museum Without Walls'.

Reflecting the multi-national aspect of the College, we were treated to a wide range of talks on non-British topics, among them Dr Yunlian Chen's on China's urbanisation; Dr Robert Weatherley's discussion of human rights in China; Dr Michael Tai on US/China relations and global finance; and Professor Young-Suk Lee on 'Britain and the change of historical consciousness in Korea, 1960–2000'.

Historical subjects ranged from antiquity – Dr Liang Cai spoke on witchcraft and the first Confucian empire, and PhD candidate Trisha Biers discussed 'The 'Giants' of Ancient Peru: secrets of the Moche royal court (AD 200–800)' – to the twentieth century – with Professor Tony Lentin's 'The Troublesome Case of Sir Edgar Speyer'; George Liebmann's 'Bernstorff Reconsidered'; Roland Huntford's talk on Roald Amundsen; Georg Schedereit on Berlusconi's Italy; and Dr Ramu de Bellescize's analysis of English and French law.

The social sciences were represented by Dr Corinne Duhig who discussed the birth of forensic archaeology and anthropology in the UK; PhD candidate Allison Paech-Ujejski on masculine gender identity during adolescence; PhD candidate Andrew Goldman on scientific approaches to musical improvisation; and MPhil candidate Zoe Strimpel on how shopping for dates online affects women.

We welcome contributions from all members of the College. Please suggest topics at www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/lunchtime

Wolfson Research Event

Krista Kemppinen (2011), Student and WRE 2013 Communications Officer

The 2013 Wolfson Research Event ('WRE', previously known as the Wolfson Research Day) took place on 3 May. Nearly 100 students, Fellows and alumni from Wolfson and our sister College, St Antony's Oxford, gathered in the Lee Hall for a highly-anticipated afternoon of sessions. The event, organised by a group of postgraduate students, included a keynote speech by Cambridge University Vice-Chancellor and Wolfson Honorary Fellow, Professor Sir Leszek Borysiewicz, oral presentations by members and alumni of both Colleges, and poster sessions. Katie Hammond, WRE Co-Chair, said: "Our hope was to bring together Wolfson and St Antony's College members from a variety of disciplines, to share their research, exchange ideas, and meet new people."

Poster and oral presentations were evaluated by judges and the best presenters were awarded a prize. This year's winners were Alexandra Reider for her oral presentation and Laura Tan for her poster presentation.

Speaking about her experience, presenter Alexandra Reider said: "Wolfson is home to some fantastically inquisitive and productive minds exploring a whole range of subjects, and I have come away from the WRE with an even greater appreciation for the intellectual energy that underpins the warm and friendly environment we have here."

Dr Steve Hoath, a Wolfson Fellow actively supporting the event, commented: "WRE 2013 provided surprises all around the Lee Hall, from the V-C's and President's keynotes to seemingly abstruse topics that sparked into life. The breadth of work on display certainly extended my awareness of Wolfson postgraduate activities at the leading edge of medical research."

The organising committee would like to thank all the presenters and judges, as well as the many Wolfson staff and departments that helped to make this event a great success. For more information on the event, including photos and a complete schedule of this year's presentations, please visit www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/seminars/researchevent

Wolfson Contemporary Reading Group

Jenny Sargent, Lee Seng Tee Librarian and Convenor

A hubristic young prince from the age of heroes; an orphaned waif with a touch of kleptomania; an ingenious centenarian, unmoved by murder* – just a few of the characters who came under scrutiny at this year's meetings of our Reading Group. We enjoyed some extremely spirited but always good-natured debates – Zadie Smith's NW in particular had the group well and truly divided – and were delighted to get the inside story from author Lawrence Norfolk, who spoke to us at our December meeting via the internet about his book, John Saturnall's Feast.

Thanks must go to Kim Allen for leading the group during a changeover of convenors, to David Goode for arranging the internet author chat and, of course, to all those who attend, regularly or occasionally, creating such lively and stimulating discussions.

Do visit the group's webpage – www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/societies/wcrg – for further information. We are a friendly and relaxed group, always open to new members and suggestions for future reads!

Wolfson Howler

Kirsten Barnes (2009), Student

The past academic year has seen another impressive run of shows for the Wolfson Howler, with professional headline acts including Tim Key, Josh Widdicombe, Carl Donnelly and Elis James. The event was started by Wolfson alumnus and now full-time comedy agent, Chris Lander. He obviously did something right as 'the Wolfson Howler has finally overtaken the Footlights Smoker as Cambridge's best comedy night', according to The Cambridge Student.

The night is hosted by one of two professional compères, Ed Gamble and Nish Kumar, and provides a showcase for both past (Liam Williams, Ken Cheng) and present (Bhargav Narayanan, Ryan Hocking) student talent. Each show culminates with a headline act from the pro-circuit. Recent reviews from The Tab and The Cambridge Student prove that the Wolfson Howler is one of the best and most intimate comedy nights run at the University and we look forward to seeing more Wolfson students enjoying the night over the coming academic year.

Thesis Writing Group

Lesley Dingle (2001), Academic Support Officer

The Wolfson Thesis Writing Group is organised by Tutor Dr Sally Church, giving students the opportunity to discuss matters of concern in planning, executing and presenting their research. Sessions are held in the Old Combination Room over a convivial drink, where the format consists of a speaker offering a specific topic that generates friendly, informed debate.

The aim is to present a spectrum of issues that range from the diplomacy of dealing with supervisors, the personal problems of time-management and thinking constructively, the vexations of data-resourcing, the struggles of thesis construction and writing, the anxieties and opportunities for publication, and the ultimate pleasures of presenting results to an audience. To guide students through these theoretical and practical problems, speakers include University staff and informed guests, as well as students themselves. It is, we hope, a guide to very serious matters presented in a sympathetic, enlightened atmosphere. Everyone is encouraged to take part.

This year we had 18 presentations, and as usual began with an introductory talk by Senior Tutor Dr Jane McLarty on the niceties of handling supervisors. The year's programme comprised an interesting array of both practical and theoretical topics.

Michaelmas: 'A Crash Course in Thesis Writing' (Dr Giles Yeo); 'My PhD experience' (Dr Derek Adams); 'Planning a piece of written work' (Mr Richard Berengarten); 'Safeguarding your Computer Files with Cloud Computing' (Mr David Goode); 'A brief Introduction to Mind Maps' (Mr Toby Graf); 'Planning and Organising: The Researcher as Project Manager' (Dr Britta Schilling).

Lent: 'Thinking and Writing Critically' (Dr David Frost); 'The First Year Report' (Dr David Barrowclough); 'Writing Skills for Graduates' (Mr Richard Berengarten); 'Getting Published Internationally in Books and Journals' (Ms Finola O'Sullivan); 'Effective Time Management' (Dr Britta Schilling); 'Managing the Last Stages of Thesis Writing' (Dr George Karekwaivanane); 'Avoiding the Precipice: How to have a life whilst writing a thesis' (Dr Christine Corton).

Easter: 'Thesis Writing from the Examiners' Perspective' (Dr Michael Langford); 'Sailing Through Times of Stress' (Miss Xuan Li); 'Navigating Without a Map: from first year angst to successful completion' (Mr Daniel Carter); 'Communicating your Research through Oral Presentations: Tips & Tricks' (Dr Ana Luisa Toribio Fierro).

It is hoped that participants benefited from this rich mix to cover all tastes and needs. Thanks to all the speakers who made it a success, including the students who supported our efforts.

Wolfson Music Society

Andrew Goldman (2010), Student and Society President

The Music Society has continued its active performance schedule. The Saturday Lunchtime Concerts featured John McKean performing on the harpsichord that Wolfson Fellow Professor Brian Moore donated to College in 2010, Wolfson student Salvatore Morra performing pieces from his new classical guitar album as well as improvising on the oud, Darwin College's Jiayi Liu performing a richly varied programme on our trusty grand piano in the Lee Hall, traditional Hungarian Kozos music played by the Mentés Másként duo visiting from Cambridge's twin city, Szeged, with an invitation to the audience to sing and dance along, and Barnaby Brown performing on triplepipes (which he designs himself) and bagpipes, including some of his own compositions.

Wolfson Research Associate Dan Tidhar launched the Early Music Recitals on select Fridays before Formal Hall to make the most of our harpsichord. The Music and Madeira series included a toe-tapping performance from 'Classico-Latino' and a recital of love songs by Siobhan Stagg, soprano, with pianist Chad Vindin. The Wolfson Choir performed Purcell's opera Dido and Aeneas during Lent Term in addition to its regular performances at the College services and Garden Party.

We also launched the Jam Sessions on Sunday afternoons, providing a platform for Wolfson musicians of all styles to collaborate. They were a great success and resulted in a few groups forming and performing at Wolfson social gatherings. They will continue in the next academic year, as will the music theory lessons for beginners and intermediates.

Finally, the Music Society is fundraising for a Steinway piano for the Lee Hall. With our many concerts and invitations to professional performers, a professional instrument is really required.

Piano-a-thon performers.

During the Easter Term, the Society put on a 'Piano-a-thon' featuring over 15 musicians (mostly Wolfson members) who sought sponsorship and offered their time and talent. Professor Brian Moore generously offered to match all donations made for this event which in total raised £7,000. Our campaign has raised £26,000 so far – over one third of our goal – thanks to Wolfson musicians and the generosity of our sponsors and donors.

Wolfson College Student Association

Anastasiia Kamenska (2010), Student and WCSA President

Whilst continuing with the most successful events of previous years, the WCSA Committee started a series of new initiatives this year.

We have been working closely with our neighbouring Colleges to re-establish the West Group Alliance; this has now been re-named the Grange Road Colleges' Group and includes postgraduates (MCRs) of six other Colleges (Clare Hall, Corpus Christi, Girton, Newnham, Robinson and Selwyn). We held a very successful launch event – a joint bop for all the Colleges of the group – at Wolfson at the beginning of the Easter Term.

In order to include the wider Wolfson community, we extended the number of alcohol-free events. Some of the most popular among those were a green film screening (the 'Can' Film Festival), a Chocolate Tasting and an International Poetry Reading. Together with our Language and Culture Society we held a Travellers' Tales Night, which may become a regular WCSA event.

The Jazz and Casino Charity Night organised for students and alumni helped to raise over £1,500 for the Student Hardship Fund. Another novel event this year was the Sports Formal Hall for all our sports clubs, followed by an Awards Ceremony. The occasion acknowledged Wolfson's most outstanding sportsmen and women of the academic year and we hope it will become an annual WCSA activity.

The WCSA Committee found shaping our fellow students' College experience very rewarding and enriching. I passionately invite students to become members of the Committee next year and to get inWolfed!

The Senior Members' Society

Margaret Whichelow (2004), Senior Member Observer

During this academic year, the Senior Members hosted three Tea Parties for Visiting Fellows and Scholars, one of which should have been a Garden Party, although the wet weather changed that. Senior Members have also taken part in Dr Sally Church's meetings for overseas students to help them practise their spoken English.

The Society of Emeritus Fellows

Evelyn Lord (1997), President of the Society of Emeritus Fellows

One of the Society's aims is to support the College by organising different events open to all members of Wolfson. They are especially interesting to visitors and overseas students, showing aspects of local life and culture which might otherwise be missed.

In September 2012, a group visited royal residence Sandringham house and gardens in Norfolk, giving a glimpse of life behind the scenes. In Michaelmas Term we had a lecture and guided tour of the Han Tomb Culture exhibition at the Fitzwilliam Museum, and attended a performance of Sinfonia Antartica at the Cambridge Corn Exchange.

Lent Term started with a visit to the new Sainsbury Laboratory at the Botanic Gardens. At the Fry Art Gallery in Saffron Walden, the Society was fortunate to have a tour and discussion of the works, followed by a visit to the town's historical buildings and gardens.

Members of the Society of Emeritus Fellows.

In April, a large group set off on the North Norfolk Walk from Hunstanton to Titchwell, which included a deviation due to a tidal creek. This walk is to be an annual event open to all members of College.

Other events, planned as we write, are a visit to the Globe Theatre to see A Midsummer's Night's Dream and a journey to Houghton Hall where there is a temporary exhibition of paintings which once belonged to the Hall, on loan from St Petersburg.

Noodle Club

Naisheng Cui (2010), Student and Organiser

Wolfson is Cambridge's most cosmopolitan College with more than 80 nationalities represented. Our students come from many different parts of the world, spanning all ages and backgrounds and have intriguing stories to tell.

The Noodle Club, launched in 2010, takes full advantage of this. It has helped to create an informal environment for Wolfson students and members to understand each other's culture and to make new friends. Numerous international students benefit from practising conversational English with the help of our kind native English speakers. I will graduate this year, and look forward to a new organiser continuing the Noodle Club.

Language and Culture Society

Varun Khanna (2010), Student and Society President

Our Language and Culture Society offers members of Wolfson a chance to learn or teach a language. Many students use our contemporary language classes as part of their preparation for studying or working abroad post-Cambridge. However, just as many simply love learning a foreign language. Another important aspect for us is to give Wolfson MPhil and PhD students in linguistics and area studies an opportunity to gain teaching experience in a relaxed and friendly environment.

This year we expanded our 'culture' aspect by organising the first 'Travellers' Tales' event, in collaboration with WCSA, where speakers talked about their experiences abroad. These presentations gave a taste of the culture of the various countries visited and were well attended. We plan to hold more such events in the future: please visit our website sites.google.com/site/wolfsonlcs

Ballroom Dancing Society

Susie Hoelgaard (1976), Senior Member and Organiser

Ballroom dancing continues to be a popular entertainment among students and visitors, with some 70 new members regularly signing up for lessons at the start of each Michaelmas Term.

At the end of 2011, we sadly had to say goodbye to our long-standing teacher Rachel Glen, but this year I found a new professional, Russell Sole, who has life-long experience teaching Modern and Latin dancing in his own company and at the Cambridge Dancers' Club (CDC). Our close links with CDC have been of benefit: when College lessons stopped towards the end of Lent Term, some of our dancers moved to lessons at CDC. They have also had a chance to practise their footwork at the Club's weekly sessions and at our joint tea dances in College.

Dancing performs a valuable social function in an international environment such as Wolfson, apart from giving students a chance to learn a new skill, exercise their bodies and take a break from intellectual overload. We bring together people from every corner of the world, who can learn to feel at ease across cultural barriers as they laugh at their first clumsy attempts, twirl around the floor and bump into each other. Russell's expert tuition combined with his light touch and good humour has helped the beginners overcome initial inhibitions and gain control of their feet, get in step with the music and move in sync with their partners. I will leave our participants to speak for themselves:

"Ballroom dancing at Wolfson this year has been a really great experience. Russell is an excellent teacher, bringing confidence to even the most confused beginner, and explaining the moves clearly and with humour! I've enjoyed doing light exercise in such a friendly setting." (Sasha)

"I feel happy and healthy when dancing. It makes me more aware of my body and helps me to relax after studying. Wolfson ballroom dancing classes provide me with a great opportunity to meet friends, especially those who also enjoy dancing. Stepping with music elegantly (well, hopefully), I always feel the class is too short!" (Li-Ching).

For my part it has been a privilege over the years to get to know so many students and initiate them into the joys of dancing. I hope to carry on for another season, with help from Russell.

Arts Film Society

Milosz Paul Rosinski (2012), Student

The Arts Film Society brings together Wolfsonians and guests from neighbouring Colleges weekly, to show critically acknowledged films and engage in discussion. This year, each term's showing followed a theme. The rupture of the classifications of documentary and fiction were the focus in Michaelmas Term, understanding selfhood through film as mirror was explored in Lent and, in Easter, we questioned film as an essayistic medium.

Our programme for the cosmopolitan Wolfson audience incorporated a journey from Dziga Vertov's 1929 Man with a Movie Camera to Abbas Kiarostami's 1990 Close-Up and Chris Marker's 1983 Sans Soleil. Memorable highlights of not-widely-disseminated films included the recently digitally restored 1969 film The Night of Counting the Years by Shadi Abdel Salam and the 2011 film The Black Power Mixtape 1967–75 by Göran Olsson. It was a wonderful pleasure to share images, narratives and representations with the Wolfson community, and to act as an ambassador of the MPhil in Screen Media and Cultures.

June Event 2013: Wolfstock

Toby Moncaster (2011), Student and Committee President

This year's June Event captured the feel of '60s summers, with a music festival, beach party, carnival and a dance hall. Music was the highlight of the night: 12 bands and three DJs played three stages and the crowds seemed to love them all. Highlights included the Churchill Jazz Band, Colonel Spanky's Love Ensemble and of course Wolfson's very own Jon Curtis and the Wolfsons.

Within the Wolfstock area, the music was a mix of acoustic and rock acts. On the food front, we were treated to the best barbecue ever with home-made burgers, luxury sausages, hog roast and bacon butties.

At the beach party, the old-fashioned swing boats drew the crowds all night long. Two Wolfson-based bands put on a great show and Wolfson's Tim O'Brien rounded off the night with a DJ set worthy of Ibiza.

The carnival featured fairground favourites such as the test-your-strength machine, a coconut shy and crazy golf. The highlight was the Wolfson Howler, compèred by Pierre Novelli.

The dance hall was designed to transport people back to the swinging '60s. The evening kicked off with a superb jazz pianist, followed by a jazz band that got people in the mood.

Wolfson Sports

Tom Hughes (2011), Student and WCSA Sports Officer

Wolfson has had another successful year in sport, and notable are our American Footballers John Malcolm, Matthew Hawkins, Pascal Maas, Eric Chapman and Kevin Maloney. The Pythons collected victories against most opponents, culminating in a 20–13 victory against ‘the other place’.

Christine Seeliger, a Wolfson-grown talent, rowed in the Blondie boat for the Light Blues but unfortunately this was her last race for the University. Her talents will not only be missed by the Blues but also by WCBC, where she helped to win blades in May Bumps 2011.

In Rugby League, Tom Hughes competed with the Green Lions in the 33rd Varsity Match: a brutal, rain-soaked fixture reminiscent of a battlefield, with the result not going our way.

In Tennis, Constantine Markides was awarded a grant from the Hawks Trust and continues to dominate at University level. Number one seed in the Varsity Match at The Queen’s Club, he also represented Cambridge and Oxford at the Prentice Cup tour of the US.

Basketball

Tilman Lesch (2011), Student and Captain

The Wolfson Basketball Team is the 2013 Winner of the Cambridge University College Basketball League. After a slow start during the Michaelmas Term, Lent started with three straight wins, but the team encountered a loss against Hughes Hall. Due to some unfortunate coincidences, only four players were available for the last game. Nonetheless, the Wolfson squad played as if there were six players on the field and were able to pull a clear win, securing second place. In order for Wolfson to win the League, the top team then had to lose their game on the very last day. Somewhat unexpectedly, Darwin College beat the formidable Hughes Hall, putting Wolfson first.

This is the first time for many years that Wolfson has won the College League and compensates greatly for our early loss in the Cuppers afterwards. As Captains, both Ernest Chow and Tilman would like to thank the more than 15 players that supported our team in one or more of its games. Next season, we again hope to welcome many old and new players to our weekly practice sessions and games! Go Wolfson, go!

Cricket

Austen Saunders (2010), Student and Captain

It's been a season of change for the Cricket Club, with some long-standing members moving on. Happily, we've also been able to welcome some new arrivals into the team. Given Wolfson's cosmopolitan mix of nationalities, it's always a pleasure to introduce players who've honed their skills on pitches around the world to the beauties of the English game. Fielding in the April snow, pitches as green as the outfield, and spin which suddenly refuses to spin, will always be amongst the most challenging elements of a Cambridge education!

This year we again joined forces with Downing for our campaign in the MCR League. After a tough draw last year we were hoping to make it through to the knock-out stages this summer. That, of course, is really a warm up for the big match of the year – the annual fixture against the President's XI. However, after some outstanding work in the field from both teams, the President's XI snatched an eight-run victory.

Badminton

Jens Hamlicher (2010), Student and Captain

Badminton is a team sport that requires complete concentration, mental and physical fitness and agility, and precision – fundamental skills for every student. This year, our Badminton Club formed strong men's and women's teams which dominated their divisions in the College League. Both teams won their divisions in Michaelmas and Lent and now play among the best teams in Division 2. This is an unprecedented achievement for Wolfson.

Additionally, we attracted a large number of students to practise with regularly. This allowed us to set up a second men's team that also competed in the College League and will continue to do so from next October. Moreover, after being dormant for ten years, we have re-developed our Badminton website – www.wolfson.cam.ac.uk/badminton. A Facebook group, Wolfson Badminton Society, also provides another platform for members to interact and socialise. Overall, we formed a fantastic team of friends, who will remember the successful 2012–2013 Badminton season as part of our life at Wolfson.

Squash

Rhys Coleman (2012), Student and Captain

This year has seen unprecedented success for Wolfson College Squash Club. With a strong cohort of new arrivals bolstering our existing squad, we had a magnificent start in Michaelmas Term. Our new coach, Andy D'Alessandro, deserves significant praise for getting us to raise our game still further. Following many social games, I had the difficult task of selecting a team for the College League. We won every match we played and finished top of our division by Christmas, gaining promotion in the process. To our surprise (and that of many teams around us) we repeated this success in Lent and as a result we will be playing as one of the top eight Colleges in the University next year. Pete Rogers went on to represent Cambridge against Oxford and won his Varsity Match without conceding a point; much of our success this year was based on the dedication and talent of players such as him.

Table Tennis

Varun Khanna (2010), Student and Captain, and Julian Conrad (2009), Student and Team President

We always welcome new members who seek recreational activity or wish to join our regular training sessions every Thursday and play in the termly College tournament.

This year, our first team achieved a wonderful third place in the Cambridge Cuppers tournament; the first time in Wolfson history. Some players also attended the British University and College Championships this year as part of their membership of the Cambridge University Table Tennis Club.

Next Michaelmas Term we will start playing in the Inter-College League and, with help, we also hope to acquire new tables to use for practice.

Volleyball

Debbie Bin Deng (2010), Student and Captain

During the last academic year, with grants from the Club and Volleyball England, we successfully held drop-in classes in four sections. We coach volleyball skills and game rules from beginner level to half-professional level, including overhand passing, forearm passing, smashing, tipping, turn-back passing, back field attack, serving and receiving, dig, sprawl and roll. Each one-hour class attracted between 10 and 30 people.

I would like to thank Anne Ernst, Francesca Burali D'Arezzo, Jerome Joaug and Su Li as, without all their help, the classes would never have been so successful.

Other Sports

Weekly Aerobics sessions have been held every Wednesday in the Wolfson Seminar Room with Jane Mansley as teacher, and Zumba sessions every Monday in the Lee Hall with teacher Kerry Marks. Please email Marie Louise Van Spyk (mlv28@cam.ac.uk) or Swati Ogale (Swati@cantabgold.net) if you wish to join their mailing list.

Other regular sports activities during the year, not mentioned separately, were Wolfson Ki-Aikido, Pachi Tanglang, Yoga, Salsa and Tango sessions.

Rowing

Rasha Rezk (2009), Student and Captain

This year's Lent Bumps proved once more that anything can happen. Despite having very strong women's and men's squads, the women's crew had to be content with a down one position, while the men's kept theirs stable. After four days of racing, both crews finished on a high note as W1 bumped Trinity Hall W2 by First Post Corner and M1 chased Pembroke M2 and were able to taste victory with a bump at the Railway Bridge just 200m from the finish! Altogether a very promising term and positive Lents result.

Driven by persistence and devotion, both squads were back on a clear river the week following Lent Bumps. The women's squad started training and preparing for WeHORR, a 7km race on the Thames, where they managed to go up 68 positions with an outstanding time of 21:19, beating their previous record by 1:30. Unfortunately the men's race was cancelled due to bad weather.

Intense training started in Easter Term. Two women's and one men's four were entered for the St Radegund Mile. The women came second, only beaten by a few seconds by a boat full of CUW rowers, and were actually faster than the fastest Eight in the third division of the Mays. The men's four was interrupted by a dog in the river(!), but put in a solid row before an emergency stop brought their race to an end. The men's squad then entered Champs Eights Head. They set a promising benchmark of 5:25 over 1.5km, after which they preferred to focus on training in preparation for the May Bumps.

In the Head of the Cam and Champs Eights Head, the women's squad performed better than the previous year, but it was the Nines Regatta that brought the first victory to the whole crew. After winning their first round against Selwyn W2, Wolfson W1 proceeded to the remaining rounds of the 'cup' event, racing and beating Catz W2 to win pots. The following week, they went undefeated to Peterborough Regatta, a 1km sprint bringing another two victories in two different categories: the four and the double, winning steel tankards and points for Wolfson.

Both the men's and women's squad entered the Mays Bumps with great motivation and determination. After countless early mornings (5am), head races, regattas, weeks of hard training and hands even harder, we now have both our first women's and men's boats in the second divisions, which is a great achievement, particularly for W1 who are now in the same position they lost five years ago: 16 in Division 2, which secures their position for next year's May Bumps.

This remarkable achievement wouldn't have been possible without committed and enthusiastic crews, outstanding leadership from both captains, Nick Salisbury (men's) and Tamara Steijger (women's), and exceptional coaches Stephanie Rehkuh (M1) and Chris Parkhouse (W1) who pushed, supported and inspired everybody. We're looking forward to Bumps next year and, though the challenges are much higher, we're more determined than ever to bring more victories to our beloved College!

Philanthropy in Action

WOLFSON As we head towards our 50th Anniversary in 2015, our main purpose in fundraising is to support our talented and dedicated students.

Here, some of them tell how grants and scholarships have helped them in their work. We are extremely grateful to all our generous donors, whose contributions make such a difference.

Mr Anil Ari (2012), Joe Petty Bursary

After completing my MPhil in Economics, I continued to the PhD programme in Economics but was unable to secure full funding. The financial support of the Joe Petty Bursary was therefore particularly helpful and has allowed me to focus on my research on sovereign default crises. I am extremely thankful to Wolfson, not only for this contribution but also for giving me the opportunity to join its vibrant and friendly community.

Mr Yang (Bob) Chen (2012), Yidi Lu Scholarship

Last year I started my undergraduate degree in Engineering. It is quite difficult to finance a four-year programme all by myself and thus I greatly appreciate that the College generously granted me the Yidi Lu Scholarship. This has allowed me to concentrate on my studies as well as take part in a great variety of activities.

Mr Joseph Akinnagbe (2012), Santander Universities Scholarship

After my undergraduate degree in Economics and Finance, I am now studying for the MPhil in Management which is giving me a solid grounding for running a business: I plan to start a software company after Wolfson. The Santander Universities Scholarship made a huge difference in easing the financial pressures I faced this year. I am most grateful for the help.

Mr Anthony Howarth (2012), Santander Universities Scholarship

Right at the beginning of the academic year, I received a Santander Universities Scholarship. This funding was invaluable in that it took some of the financial stress off me whilst reading for a PhD in Social Anthropology. I am most appreciative as the support actually enabled me to come to Cambridge for my studies.

Mrs Elizabeth Lockwood (2012), The President's Fund

Last September I began a five-year, part-time doctorate to investigate the development and validation of identity within educational establishments. Receiving a grant has been a greatly appreciated academic compliment. I shall honour the award and our benefactors by investing in conference attendances where I can gain expertise that I can share, to the maximum benefit of myself and my fellow PhD students.

Mr Nicolas Parisot (2012), Santander Universities Scholarship

I am studying for an MPhil in Industrial Systems, Manufacture and Management. The Institute for Manufacturing recommended Wolfson to me during my postgraduate application and I can now understand why: its great facilities and location made my year much easier. I also enjoyed the cultural diversity of the Wolfsonians I met during this year, be it in the Dining Hall, the Club Room or in the football team. But all these experiences have a price, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank Santander Universities for the Scholarship that has allowed me to concentrate on working hard and making the most of my time here.

Mr Omar Padron Castro (2012), Santander Universities Scholarship

After my studies in Chemical and Industrial Engineering and four years of work in Venezuela, Cambridge gave me an opportunity to study abroad and have a new experience. Last October, I started the MPhil course in Industrial Systems, Manufacture and Management with its combination of academia and experience in industry. With the support of Santander Universities I could participate in events and activities related to my personal and professional growth.

Miss Anastasia Bow-Bertrand (2012), John Morrison Fund

After commencing a medical degree in London I soon realised that my real passions centred on English Literature studies. It was a delight to accept a place at Wolfson, and the grant enabled the smoothest of transitions into a new academic and social environment. My year has been a rich mix of endless books, bright thinkers, poetry readings and a regular blog with Cambridge News.

Mr Alexander Robertson (2012), John Morrison Fund and Travel Support

Thanks to the generous support of Wolfson College, my first year of reading Linguistics has been much less stressful than expected. The grant made it possible to stay in College during Easter and Christmas vacations, avoiding the hardship of moving out and finding temporary accommodation – a problem which many mature students face. Additionally, a Travel Grant means I am able to participate in the 2013 Linguistic Institute abroad. Such opportunities would be inaccessible without the help of Wolfson.

The Morrison Society

The Morrison Society, named after the College's first President, John Morrison, was established in 2008 for all those who notify us that they have included a legacy to Wolfson College in their Will. Members' names are displayed in a special commemorative book and we are delighted to invite Society members to our annual Commemoration of Benefactors' Dinner, to show our appreciation during their lifetime for this important commitment. We are grateful to the following, as well as to those members who prefer to belong anonymously to the Society.

Obituaries

Mr Frederick Maurice Algate

Founding Fellow and Emeritus Fellow

15 November 1922–14 May 2013

Bill Kirkman

Fred Algate became a Founding Fellow of Wolfson (then University) College in 1965. He was born in London and studied economic history at the London School of Economics. He had a varied and distinguished career in university administration. After posts as Administrator in the Department of Education at Leicester University, Assistant Registrar at Hull (where he was instrumental in its move to University status) and Secretary of the Board of Education at Liverpool University, he came to Cambridge in 1962. As Secretary of the Board of Graduate Studies he made a great impact, given his wide and varied experience of university administration elsewhere. After retiring in 1977 he spent some time as Administrator of Erddig, a National Trust property near Wrexham. Having learnt Welsh, he gave talks in that language.

Fred was an accomplished pianist and clarinettist and an excellent tennis player. He qualified for Junior Wimbledon, which was sadly cancelled because of the onset of the Second World War. He was also a connoisseur of fine wine and put his knowledge to good use as a member of the Wine Committee at the then new College. Although his failing health in recent years meant that he was unable to attend College functions, he was very proud to have been an Emeritus Founding Fellow of Wolfson and continued to take an interest in College affairs.

Dr John Clevedon Brown

Former Fellow

25 March 1928–14 April 2013

John Flowerdew

John Brown spent much of his early life in Bristol helping with the family horticulture business. He gained a PhD on hedgehog brain anatomy at Bristol University and, after stints at Royal Holloway College and Cardiff University Medical School, he joined the Department of Applied Biology at Cambridge where he developed his interests in histology, histochemistry and mammalogy. John was a Fellow at Wolfson from 1984 to 1988 and also a member of the Garden Committee.

John will be most remembered for his contributions to mammalogy, where he published ground-breaking work. He was an early member of the Mammal Society and served the Society as Scientific Secretary, Publications Officer and Editor of its new journal Mammal Review. John was instrumental in helping to launch the journal and in the publication of its early volumes. In 1981 he was awarded the Society's Silver Medal for his outstanding service.

John was a bibliophile, also enjoying classical music, gardens and gardening, cooking, British history and archaeology.

Professor Robert E Dewar

Fellow and Visiting Fellow

4 July 1949–7 April 2013

Gordon Johnson

Robert Dewar studied for his doctorate at Yale where he met his wife, Professor Alison Richard. He went on to become Professor and Head of the Department of Anthropology at the University of Connecticut. Although his early work was concerned with settlement in the north-eastern United States he became particularly involved, with Professor Richard, in a long-term study of environmental change in Madagascar. He was mainly concerned with the impact of human settlement on the eco-systems of the island and argued for understanding environmental change as a complex interaction of many natural forces.

He maintained his research interests in Cambridge with a Fellowship at the McDonald Institute. We knew him best as a graceful host in the Vice-Chancellor's Lodge and through his assiduous presence at Cambridge events, both in this country and abroad. It was always a pleasure to see him across the room, wearing one of his wonderful bow ties.

Professor John Charles Hutton

Former Fellow

18 May 1948–18 December 2012

Owen Edwards

John Hutton was acknowledged as a world leader in diabetes research. He was born in Australia and had a glittering early career completing a PhD in Diabetic Retinopathy. As with many Australians he set out to conquer the world, initially working at the Université Libre de Bruxelles. He was awarded a two-year Fellowship and progressed to Cambridge to work with the late Professor Nick Hales, a leading authority on insulin production and its assay.

He was a Junior Research Fellow at Wolfson between 1980 and 1983 and became deeply involved with the College and much enjoyed its multi-ethnic atmosphere. I knew him both at College and at Addenbrooke's and found him an engaging young man with a wry sense of humour and self-effacing modesty about his great scientific gifts. I am uncertain as to whether his love of fly-fishing was fostered as well as his scientific ability under the tutelage of Nick Hales. It is noteworthy that he had a festsschrift (written celebration) before Nick Hales had an angling title.

In 1995 he was appointed Research Division Director at the Barbara Davis Centre for Childhood Diabetes, University of Colorado, where his laboratory played a major role in establishing the developmental biology of pancreatic islet cells and their function.

Professor Royston Kenneth Penny

Founding Fellow

17 June 1931–7 September 2012

Roy Penny studied engineering at the University of Bristol. He went on to take up a sequence of industrial appointments in the UK and in North America, including with aircraft manufacturer AVRO Canada.

In 1964, he became Assistant Director of Research in the Engineering Department of the University of Cambridge and was appointed to set up a 'creep laboratory'. His research on how materials deform (or 'creep') at high temperatures was crucial in facilitating the design of nuclear plants and to making nuclear power safer.

While at Cambridge, Professor Penny also became a Founding Fellow of University (now Wolfson) College. In 1967, he was appointed to the Chair of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Liverpool. After 11 years there, he returned to industry before becoming Head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Cape Town in 1985, retiring six years later. In 1994, he began organising a series of conferences in Cape Town for South Africa's engineering and academic communities.

Reproduced in abridged form with the kind permission of Times Higher Education

Mrs Stella Soulioti

Visiting Fellow

13 February 1920–2 November 2012

Gordon Johnson

Stella Soulioti crowned a distinguished legal career in Cyprus as Minister of Justice and Attorney-General. In later life she was among those trying to mediate between the Greek and Turkish communities in Cyprus. In October 1982 she was elected a Visiting Fellow of Wolfson, among the earliest of what was to become a steady stream of academic and professional lawyers attracted to the College by Professor Sir David Williams. She proved to be good and lively company, and also helped establish scholarship programmes for Cypriot students to come to Cambridge for graduate study.

Mr Neville Stack

Press Fellow

2 September 1928–27 October 2012

Bill Kirkman

Neville Stack worked at several regional and national newspapers. After retiring he came to Wolfson in 1987 as the first Press Fellow to spend an entire year with us. This was a reward for a remarkable 13 years' stint as Editor of the Leicester Mercury.

He loved Wolfson and, upon being asked what he liked most about it, coined the phrase: "the ambient IQ." During his Fellowship he organised a very successful symposium, attended by some of the major figures in the UK newspaper world, on 'Editing in the Nineties'.

Neville approached being Press Fellow as he approached everything else – with huge and infectious enthusiasm. He used the Wolfson opportunity to build a new phase in his career, and became known internationally as a columnist and as an organiser of seminars for young journalists. I say organiser, but in effect Neville often worked as a one-man band, with boundless energy and commitment. Above all, he was an eccentric, a great character, and a great asset to Wolfson, for which he had an abiding affection.

New Fellows 2012–2013

Bredon Fellow

On 1 July 2013, His Excellency Mahfouz bin Mahfouz was elected the College's first Bredon Fellow. He holds a Law degree from King Abdulaziz University, Saudi Arabia, and is the Chief Executive, Finance Director and controlling shareholder of the Marei bin Mahfouz Group, a leading corporation based in Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

The Group was founded by his father, Sheikh Marei Mubarak Mahfouz bin Mahfouz, whose family originally came to Saudi Arabia from the Yemen. The Marei bin Mahfouz Group is a diversified group of companies engaged in the business of retail and wholesale trade, and also has substantial property holdings, including hotels.

In 2012 HE Mahfouz bin Mahfouz set up a registered charity, The Mahfouz Foundation, with the aim of advancing education in the United Kingdom with regard to the culture, history, language, literature and institutions of the Middle East. His strong interest in British culture has led him to seek to develop a long-term relationship with Wolfson College, and he has been most generous in making a substantial donation to the College.

Fellows

Dr Haider Butt, originally from Pakistan, received his PhD from the CU Department of Engineering in April 2012. His PhD thesis was focused on metamaterials based on carbon nanotubes. In October 2012 he was awarded a Cambridge Philosophical Society sponsored Henslow Research Fellowship at Wolfson College. In 2013 he also received an ABTA Doctoral Research Award. His research interests include nanophotonics, metamaterials, nano-structured materials and liquid crystals.

Dr Sreenivas Chavali is an EMBO Long Term Fellow at MRC Laboratory of Molecular Biology. His investigations aim at linking how variation in DNA alters externally observable traits (phenotypes).

Dr Qing Dai is a Research Associate at the Centre of Molecular Materials for Photonics and Electronics at the CU Department of Engineering.

Dr Simon Elsässer is a Herchel Smith Fellow, working at the MRC Laboratory of Molecular Biology. He obtained his PhD in 2011 from Rockefeller University. He is interested in how chromatin regulated genes expression in eukaryotic cells and is applying biochemical, structural and chemical biology approaches to address this problem.

Dr Meng-Chuan Lai is a Research Associate at the Autism Research Centre. His current research aims at elucidating the heterogeneity of autism by specifying and contrasting its various subgroups, with a particular focus on females with autism. He was awarded the Donald J Cohen Fellowship from the International Association for Child and Adolescent Psychiatry and Allied Professions in 2012. He also obtained an Adjunct Assistant Professorship at the Department of Psychiatry, College of Medicine, National Taiwan University starting from August 2013.

Dr Jesper Levinsen moved to the Cavendish Laboratory in 2010 as a Marie-Curie Fellow and later as a Fellow of the Carlsberg Foundation. His research focused on ultracold atomic gases, with particular emphasis on the properties of strongly correlated systems. He left Cambridge in June 2013 for a Fellowship at Aarhus Institute of Advanced Studies.

Upon 50 Years

by John McClenahen (1986), Press Fellow

The College is stone and mortar, and wood and glass.
The College is ideas, great and small.
The College is books and the Internet.
The College is gates, gardens, paths, courts, and plaques, and a sundial.
The College is Lee Library, the Dining Hall, and Bredon House.
The College is students, and tutors, and Fellows.
The College is fellowship, principles, and ritual.
And the College, this College, Wolfson College, Cambridge, is much more.
For this remarkable College is a diverse universe, ever expanding.
From this College, in their diversity,
those who study, guide, and reside here
seek knowledge and truth in myriad ways.
From this College, this special place,
those who study, guide, and reside here
seek to create, to find, to explore, to challenge, and to validate.
Now and forever may their efforts – all our efforts wherever we are – ring true to the diversity and distinguishing humanness of this College, our young College in this ancient University.
